John MacTavish was the British consul in Baltimore, and his wife Emily was the granddaughter of Charles Carroll, the last surviving signatory of the Declaration of Independence. He was reputedly the richest man in America, owning huge tobacco plantations and many slaves, some of whom, together with a mansion in Baltimore, were bequeathed to John MacTavish on his death. Charles Carroll’s daughter Mary married Richard Caton, who settled in Baltimore in 1785 and “engaged in the manufacture of cotton goods”. They had four daughters: Mary, aged 19, married Robert Patterson (thus becoming a sister-in-law of Joseph Bonaparte). In Spain the Pattersons met the Duke of Wellington. When Robert Patterson died in 1819, Mary married the Duke’s brother, Richard Wellesley, Earl of Mornington, Marquis Wellesley and Lord Lieutenant of Ireland. At the time he was struggling financially (apart from his £35,000 p.a. salary) and she brought a useful £800,000 in cash. Louisa married the Duke’s aide de campe Col Sir Felton Bathurst Hervey. Hervey died in 1819 and his widow married the eldest son of the Duke of Leeds, Francis Godolphin d’Arcy Osborne, Marquis of Carmarthen. Elizabeth married Baron Stafford in 1836. Emily, the youngest and the only one to leave descendants, married John MacTavish. | 1 bundle |
